Our Character is the Harvest of Time's Passage

Each of us is many people. Our moods vary with each second. Sometimes we are thrilled, sometimes enraged, silly, pensive, and occasionally - totally content.

Our actions cannot be predicted with a barometer or mathematical theorem. The clumsily struck chimes of an ice-cream truck may summon wistful memories of childhood escapades one day; the next, you only feel irritation at such a shrill sound.

As children, we are molded by our immediate environment. We are accepting and respectful. But, as we enter high school, our personality is ripe for development. Being bombarded by so many new faces, locations, attitudes, and experiences (not to mention knowledge) challenges us to answer life's questions for ourselves; not according to someone else's rule book.

At the close of each year you can take stock. Glance back, over your shoulder and into your mind. How are you different? Do you remember what it was that first evoked an understanding or realization of a phase of life you never before considered? Most likely not. People take growing up for granted. They never see the forces working upon their character, refining it, stretching it, testing the very essence of their individuality.

Pause for a moment in your headlong rush toward the ever new, ever better you, to ponder this past year. Each of us has evolved and grown as a person. We have reaped the benefits of our actions. What you have chosen to give of yourself will determine your Harvest. Now, through this book, review and judge; retrace the steps that have made you the individual you presently are.

Therein lies the Harvest of 1971-72.

Teachers Sow

What does a grade mean? Some say, "it's whether or not the teacher likes you," while others insist "it's memorizing twenty zillion chemical formulas." Is it a percentage, a level, a label, status symbol — or something else? Ideally, it should give some measure of your mental growth. However, to set a standard that will relate to every student is not feasible. A common denominator for all people has never been discovered. Little wonder we are often baffled at the discouragingly low mark received for what we consider supreme effort.

So what purpose does Woodward High School serve? School teaches us many things. Some are obvious — such as, "French adjectives follow the verb," but other, more subtle skills, are also taught. These include comprehension, intelligent debate, analysis, observation, deduction and judgment.

No one can explain the intricacies of forming an opinion to the student. It is an unique pattern that you develop for your private use. It is totally personal. This is the teachers' goal; to guide you to your own highest level of understanding and deft utilization of facts.

Although the dates of Civil War battles may slip your mind, the quality of your reasoning — or your ability to think, will never fade away. It will lead you safely through all the situations and decisions of a lifetime. So, strive for that "A", but keep in mind that it's not the grade that matters, but if you have glimpsed the outermost boundaries of your mind — better known as your total capacity.

the Seeds of Mental Growth

Athletes

Some may feel that attaining success in athletic contests depends solely on chance – if the weather is sunny and clear; if no one is injured; if the team functions well as a unit. A bad day for one player could spell doom for the total collective effort. And what can a school do about just plain puny, ineffective athletes?

To a certain extent, all physical endeavors are limited by the body. Muscles and bones work only in ways compatible to their structure. Yet, as you see a football game, it is the raw passion of the men, not their physiological capabilities, which is so electrifying.

Some sports are for a group of players totting jointly to achieve a common goal, whereas others rely on the strengths and weaknesses of one lone individual. Each sport varies in its rules, demands and philosophies. They are incomparable. But, at the same time, all sports are cast in identical molds.

Every sport challenges the participant to strain toward the ultimate degree of exertion. Push, push, PUSH. Try harder; sweat more, give more.

Because he must give so much of himself to win, the athlete has to condition his mind as well as his body. His brain becomes the controlling force behind a body exploding with power.

All the practice, the drilling, the building up of experience, results in triumph for the dedicated athlete.

Victory is the Harvest of all which has preceded.

Progress in Proportion to their Efforts

The Yield of High School Days

Enchanted Times... Carefree and Joyful

High school days are the sunshine times. We streak instantaneously from one interest to another. Every activity is fantastically absorbing and rewarding in its own singular way. Our hopes are alternately raised to the highest pinnacle, then dashed to the deepest canyon. Each day brings a new crisis or a new wonder. But, through it all, the knowledge that what occurs isn't deathly serious is always present to relieve the pressure.

As students, we can revel in the excitement of football games, the shining dreams of dances and dates, the warm glow of friendship, and the deep satisfaction experienced upon completion of a ton of homework. We have school queens, club and class officers, athletic heroes, honor students, artists and celebrities. There is a place for anyone willing to exert a little effort. True, work is involved, but almost everyone is eager to pat you on the back – to encourage you – to urge you forward. Teachers, students and parents are proud to acknowledge your accomplishments.

After high school, people will not be so keen to pursue and praise you. Your responsibilities will be greater and your decisions more weighty. There will be no excuses or second chances for failures in work, school or society. Life's tone will deepen – your life will begin in earnest.

Here is a sampling of the happy times – the pick of the crop. Look around – don't you see your face in the crowd?"

A Silent Harvest

True service does not bellow to advertise its existence. It unobtrusively goes about its business finishing what has been started and initiating what needs to be created.

Although the foundation of Woodward rests on the vast amount of work unselfishly contributed by many individuals, most of this work goes unapplauded and unrewarded. We ignore it because it is so very basic and necessary. After all, it is easier to do the frills of the job and thereby earn quick praise than to tackle the "nitty gritty" (which so often seems boring and dry).

But for those who are willing to give some aid, the returns are great. In exchange for their time and effort, they receive some fun, many friends and a deep feeling of satisfaction. This contentment is priceless payment for something as simple and direct as helping one's fellow man.

By working with one another not only is our job made easier but also our unity grows deeper.

A Harvest of Friends

Teachers, students, parents and unknown faces on a city street – all are PEOPLE. They pass in and out of our lives making little lasting impression. Occasionally you find a deeply understanding friend. The two of you can discuss anything. You are totally honest with one another. If you were ever stranded somewhere and were all alone and scared, you could call this friend. Help and moral support would be instantly offered. Sometimes just their support is all that is needed. You want to know what they think of a certain person, or what they would do in this situation. A friend's advice boosts your courage and your spirits. He or she is always there to loan you what you need or assist in the completion of a homework problem. Close friends work together, laugh together, stick together, and after a disagreement, are quickly back together.

Now at the conclusion of another year, review your friends. Some are old friends, whereas others were discovered only a few short months ago; but each and every one of these people is very special. They are friends. Cherish and appreciate each of their unique qualities. We all have experienced the happiness friendship can bring. Day in and day out we live among potential friends. Therefore, this book, the 1971-1972 Saga, is dedicated to you and your friends PEOPLE.

Spirit, Tempered with Dedication, Promote

Woodward's number one spirit spreader... principal, Mr. Thaddeus (Ted) Szelagowski.

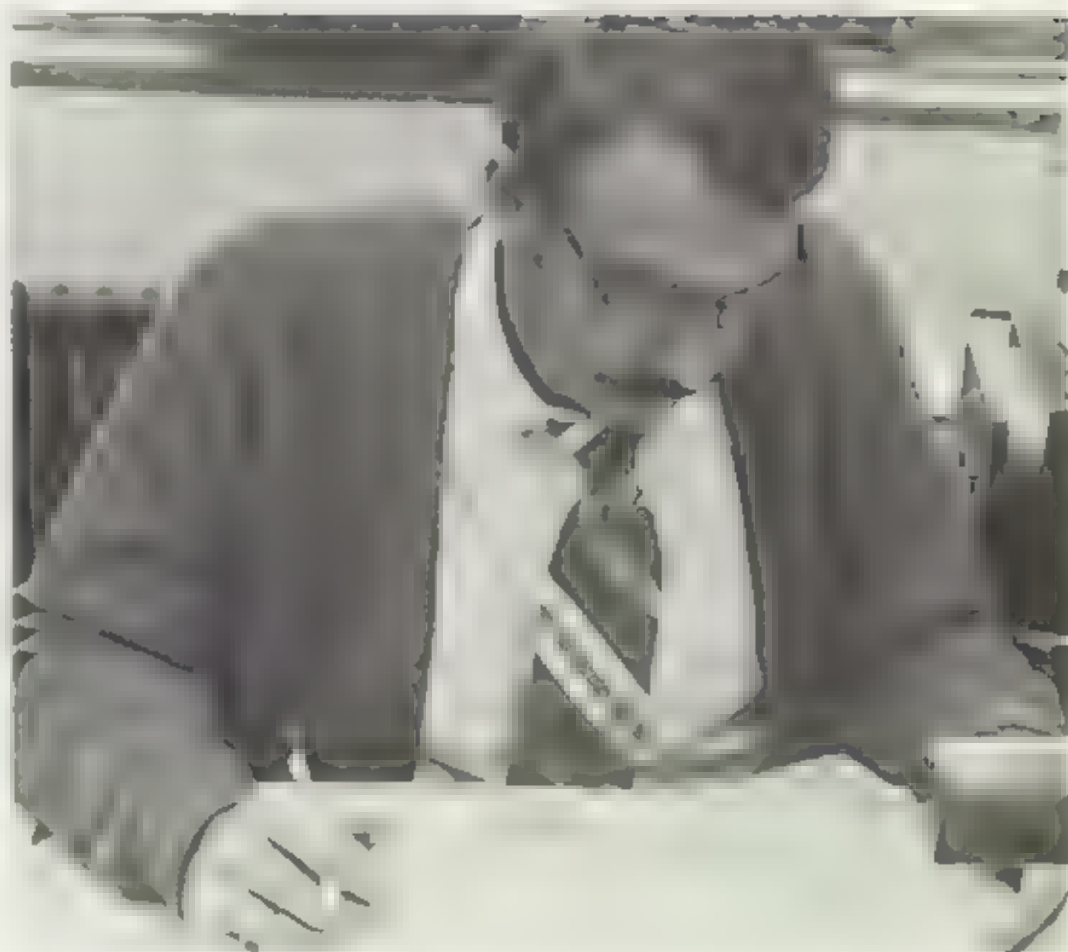

Industrious Administration

Spirit was a major point of interest this year at Woodward, and the best examples were set by the administration

When it came to athletics, they were there, really caring about the outcome of the game

Academically, they were ready to help and were truly concerned with the success of the students

This spirit is what helped the principal and assistant principals accept the problems that beset them early in the year. It was no easy task to add 200 students to the enrollment, especially when W.H.S. was short five teachers. The administration adjusted as well as possible, and it could be this extra effort, this spirit, that made the 1971-72 school year such a success

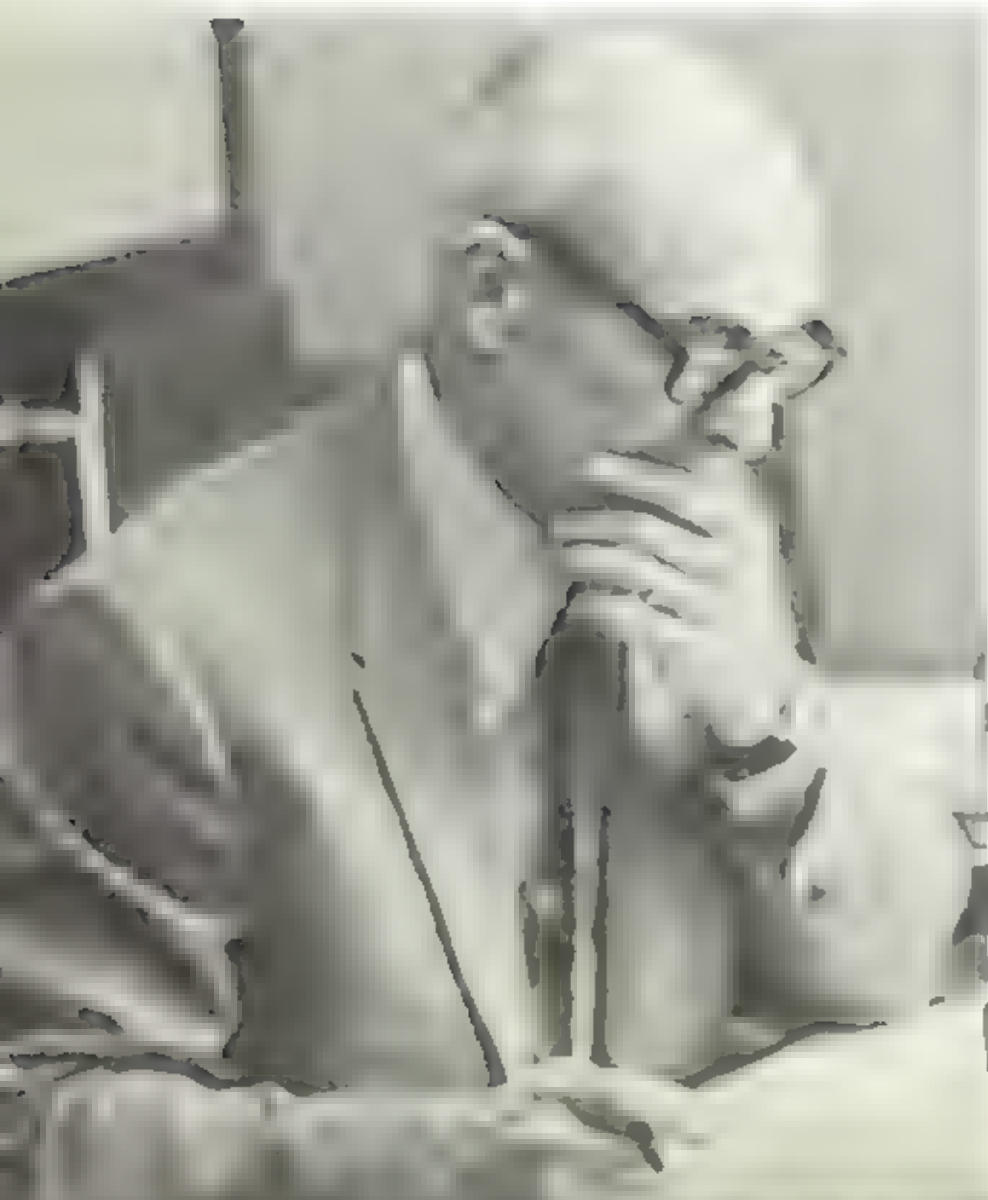

As vice-principal in charge of counseling, it is a rarity to find Mr. Gwozdz, above, working undisturbed. Left, a typical expression of activities vice principal, Mr. Gets an odd mixture of wonder and concern. Woodward's lone feminine administrator Mrs. Hall, below, has the responsibility of faculty and curriculum

Conferences, paperwork, and telephone conversations are all part of the daily agenda of Mrs. Williamson. Mr. Crawford and Miss Hill.

Counselors' Responsibilities Change, Adds Interest To Position

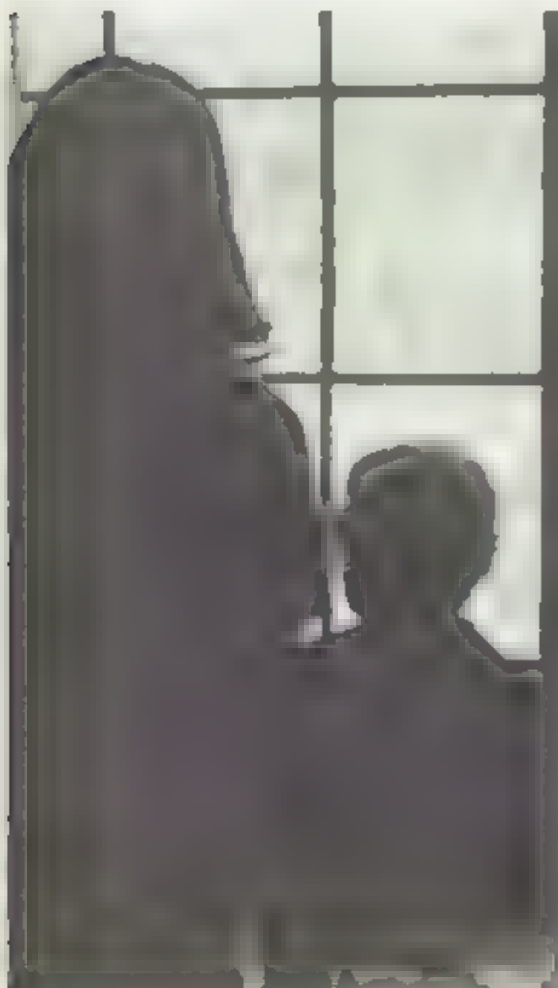

Since the abolition of the posts of Boys' and Girls' Deans, Woodward counselors have been dealt many new responsibilities

Along with these new duties, which include discipline and issuance of building permits, come some very interesting situations. Picture the embarrassment of a male who, in order to procure a building permit, must explain to his female counselor how his pants were torn. Or imagine trying to discipline a young Lothario with a compulsion to bear-hug female students. (Solitary confinement was successful - once.)

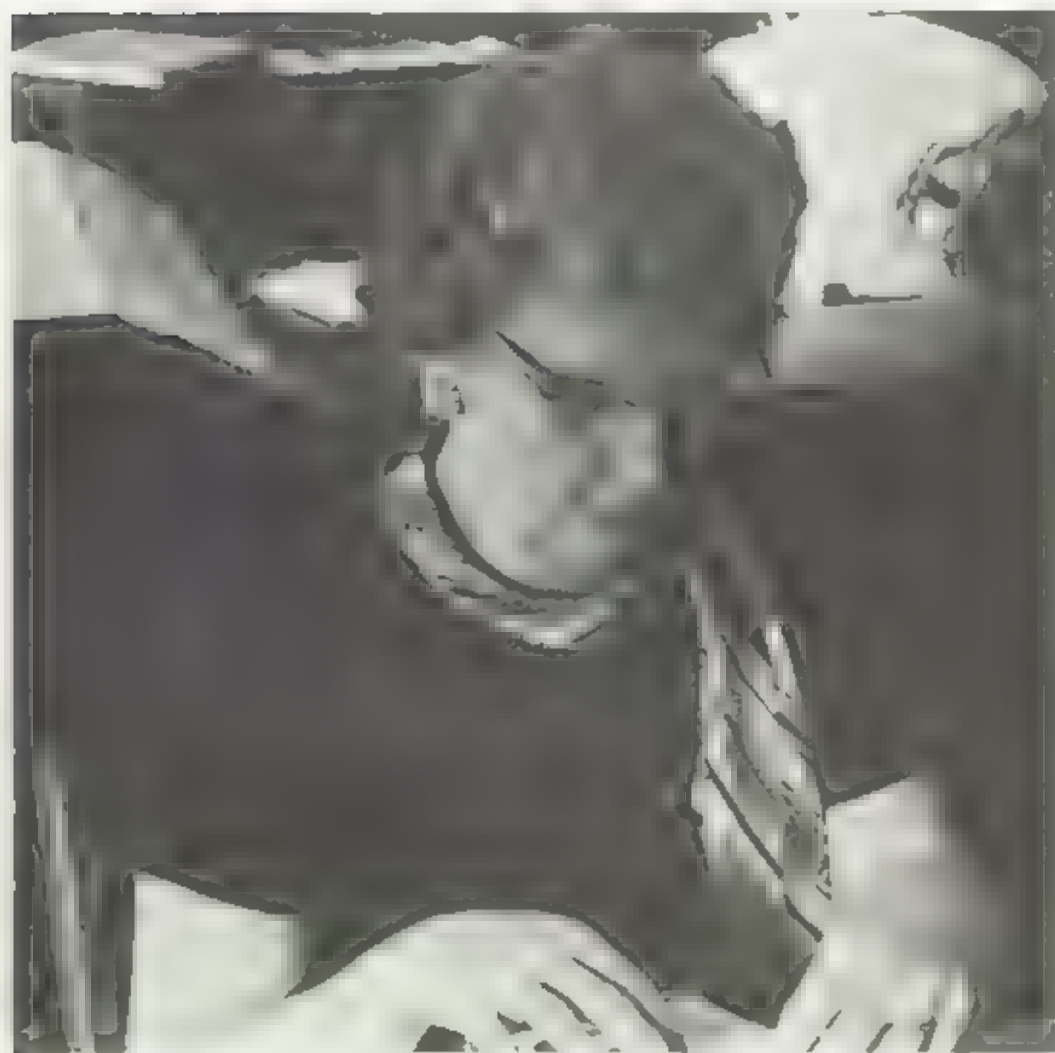

Being a counselor isn't what it once was, but its ultimate purpose is still the benefit of the student.

Mr. Martin, above, researches a student's background. Mrs. Winquist, left, silhouetted against Wilson Park, is deeply involved in a conference.

A walk down to the front office may prove to be more exciting than you might imagine. Just watching the activities going on down there could be tiring. You would hear typewriters pounding, telephones ringing, and all kinds of questions being asked and answered. You would see tests and worksheets being mimeographed, money being deposited and withdrawn, and mounds of forms being filled out.

There are other people just as busy as the office staff, but located in other parts of the building. They are the Library and Book Clerk. Checking names and numbers keeps them busy all day long.

All these jobs are important and no school could operate without the people to work at them.

English Teachers Impress Upon Students the

"No man, however learned, can be called a cultured man while there remains an unbridged gap between his reading and his life."

J. C. Powys

The book from which this quotation was taken is The Meaning of Culture. What Powys is saying is that reading is the key to knowledge. This fact is exactly what English teachers have been trying to say to students for years. The courses offered in our English program are exemplary. Freshman and sophomore English courses are centered around reading poetry and short stories. Juniors and seniors have a choice of American Novel and Drama, Junior and Senior Composition, and Contemporary Literature. All these courses form a good background for future interpretation of literature

Language Students Benefit From Teachers' Personal Experiences

Have you ever wondered why, while walking down first floor near the Athletic Office, you couldn't quite understand every word you heard? Simple! You're just a few steps away from our Foreign Language rooms. It's in this part of the building that people speak French, German, Latin, and the newest language to come to Woodward — Chinese

All of our Foreign Language instructors are highly qualified to teach their subject. Each one of them has come in contact in one way or another with the country whose language they are teaching. This especially benefits the students because they learn not only the foreign tongue, but also the history and the customs of the country

The photographers catch Mrs. Frischmann showing true Homecoming spirit

Home Ec. Teachers Hope Skills Prove Helpful In Future

If someone makes a statement that the students up on second floor really have something cooking — don't laugh! They're probably referring to our Home Economics classes. Potential chefs are busy all day long preparing tasty dishes. Their reward? They get to eat what they fix, of course!

Along with preparing the food, students are also taught the selection and purchase of nutritional food for balanced meals.

Another phase included in our Home Economics course is sewing. Students learn not only how to sew but also how to select fabrics for clothing and home furnishings.

This combination of cooking and sewing skills is an excellent preparation for future homemakers or students with plans of becoming professional Home Economists.

Increased Technology Demands Expanded

With modern living based on technology, expansion of the science department has become the only practical solution.

For example, for the college-bound students the Advanced Placement Chemistry class has been instituted. At the end of the year students take a test to determine if they will receive college credit for the course.

Rising interest and concern with man and his relationship to his environment, has led to the establishment of a course in Human Ecology.

These, along with Physical Science, Biology, Physiology and Anatomy, and Physics, round out a curriculum offering a growing list of specialized subjects to prospective young scientists.

Mathematics Teachers Introduce Challenging Problems To Students

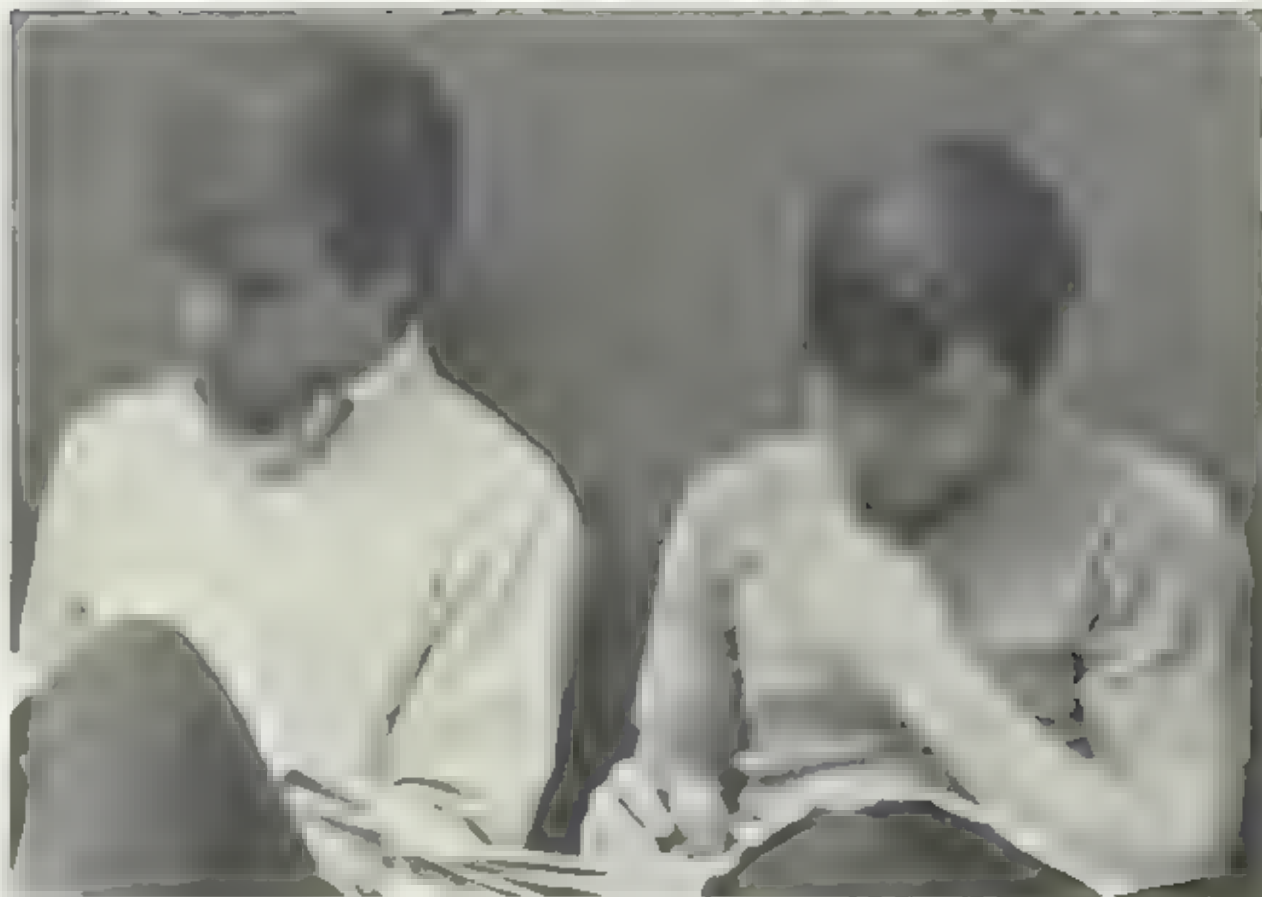

Log $\tan 71^\circ 20' = 9.8942 - 10$. Look familiar? It might if you study in any of the math courses offered here at Woodward. Problems like these, and some even more difficult, are tackled each day by our math students and teachers.

Contrary to what many students believe, they are not presented with difficult math problems merely to confuse them. By solving these problems they can learn to think logically, which can help them in many subjects, not just math.

Students are required to take at least one year of math. After this initial course, you can go on to such subjects as Algebra I, Algebra II, Geometry and Senior Math.

Body, Mind Given Equal Emphasis in Physical

Something few people have in this age of mechanism and automation is physical fitness. Consequently, it is the goal of the Physical Education department to instill in students a healthy respect for the body and its need for exercise.

In Health classes, the more hygienic aspects are studied; while in the gym, the main objective is to tone the body into sound condition. This is done through a strenuous regimen, including calisthenics, dancing, and organized games.

Training for Future Jobs

There was one main theme in mind when the Industrial Arts curriculum was being planned learning a useful skill by coordinating mind and hand. End result: a good job without a college education.

The Industrial Arts Department is divided into various shops. Here each student spends hours acquainting himself with the machinery and techniques of the field in which he wishes to specialize

He can choose from woodshop, auto mechanics, printing, and mechanical or architectural drawing. Any one of these subjects is an excellent preparation for a future career

Through Practice, Dedication, Music Department Grows

Music is never very far from the thoughts of Mr. Simpson, right. Long hours of practice, above, sometimes leaves the students feeling drained. Intense is the word that best describes Mr. Biler's love for music, below.

Other than the usual musical practice, there was much activity in the band department this year. New uniforms were being ordered and $13,014.60 had to be raised, in order to pay for them.

Meanwhile, in the vocal music sector, equal time and energy were being poured into practice for the choruses' annual concerts.

Both of these subjects are regular, full-credit courses; yet many extra hours, outside the classroom, are put into rehearsals and general preparation. Why? Perhaps it is what Robert Browning wrote, "Who hears music, feels his solitude peopled at once."

Creativity: Art Students' Greatest Asset

The greatest asset that a prospective artist can possess is creativity. Witness Woodward's own art department and the student's within.

These people use their surroundings to the fullest extent . . . not only for inspiration, but also for materials. Things that are ordinarily thought worthless are turned either into attractive art pieces or useful utensils.

Most people have some creative ability and the general art classes try to awaken that talent

Even art instructors, like Mrs. Wiseley, above, fall victim to the universal plague of teachers . . . paperwork. Mrs. Grant, left, obviously enjoys her role as creativity coach

History Teachers Strive for

"Why study History? There's no future in it!" This is a common statement made not only by students at Woodward, but students everywhere. Trying to change this attitude we have fifteen hard working teachers. They do their best to make dull facts interesting — sometimes an impossible task.

As Freshmen there's Civics; Sophomores have World History. Juniors are required to take American History, while Government is a must for Seniors. There are also electives of Contemporary History, Sociology, Economics, and Senior Seminar for those students who wish to extend their historical studies.

Occupational Work Experience Adjusts Curriculum to Student Needs, Offers Jobs

One of the biggest problems of adolescence is the choice of a career. Now, at Woodward, help is available to freshmen and sophomores through the Career Explorations Program, under the direction of Mr. Michael Kedzierski

Also of benefit to W.H.S. students, is the Occupational Work Experience program. For the student with difficulty adjusting to conventional curriculum, it offers a chance to advance at a more suitable rate. They then finish school with experience in a job of their choice

Distributive Education More Than Just Job and Club

When people outside the class discuss Distributive Education, their topic may be the occupational aspect of the program. Perhaps it concerns the D.E. club. Seidom do people talk of the educational portion of Distributive Education.

In class, students are instructed in sales techniques, merchandising, and other job-related subjects. An important part of the curriculum is based on the preparation of research manuals. Each student chooses a subject, concerning consumer products or services, and researches it. It is then submitted to local, state, and national competition

Safe Roads Goal Of Drivers Education

Prospective drivers under the age of eighteen must pass an accredited driver education course, thanks to the revision of state laws a few years ago. Consequently, Driver Education has become one of the most demanded classes in Woodward's curriculum.

Graded in two parts, classroom and car, the goal of the semester-long course is to put skilled, knowledgeable drivers on the road. The knowledge gained in the classroom is then put to test in the car in real situations.

Engineers, Custodians, Cafeteria Personnel Deserve

Long before the building opens each morning, and long after it closes each night, there is much activity in the school. It is the hustle and bustle of the people whose job it is to make you comfortable; the engineers, custodians, and cafeteria personnel.

So well-done are their tasks, that most people have come to expect that the building will be warm, the floors will be clean, and that a balanced meal has been prepared. The only drawback to this efficiency is that we often forget to give these people what they earnestly deserve . . . our gratitude and thanks.

Did you ever have the feeling that you have finally been recognized for something you have accomplished? If you did, you have a slight idea of how the members of the National Honor Society feel. Membership in the National Honor Society is not attained overnight. It is something you work for from the very first day of school and it is not until you are a senior that you find out you have made it; you have reached the long awaited goal.

The first step to membership in the National Honor Society is the Junior Honor Society. It consists of sophomores and juniors who have shown scholastic achievement.

Philalethean

The Periclean Literary Society has been a leader of many activities this year. As in the past they were in charge of Homecoming; this year they took on the added responsibility of general chairmanship of the Trilit. In order to make these and many other activities possible the Peris begin work early in the summer; raising money by having car washes, bake sales and various other projects.

The Philalethean Literary Society is also active throughout the year. As a service to the community the Phils collected for UNICEF. Their massmeeting will be remembered as a highlight of the year, since they presented baby pictures of the senior members of the football team. Also, the Phils took charge of decorations for the Trilit. Funds for many of their activities were provided by popcorn ball sales in addition to many of the usual money making projects.

Y-Teens

The members of Woodward's Zetaethian Literary Society could best be described in just one word — enthusiastic. The time of year doesn't discourage this club from any activity. During the summer the Zets had a weekly stadium cleanup, painted the lines in the parking lot, and painted the stadium along with several other clubs. The Zets sponsored the Shoe Bowl massmeeting, had various bake sales and other fund raising projects.

Y-Teens are a large group of young girls who pride themselves in being just that, young girls! The club had many activities geared towards just plain fun. Advisor, Mrs. Grant, coordinated all club functions.

Aequatatis

The Quill and Dagger Literary Society under the leadership of Ed You, has led an eventful year. Activities were under way early in the summer with car washes to raise needed funds. During the year they sold key rings as a reminder of our football season. As a service to the community, QD members contributed their time to help sell papers for the annual Old Newsboys Paper Drive.

The Aequatatis Literary Society had some trouble getting itself organized this year. After getting a late start, they did manage to have several activities before the year was over.

The Junior Council on World Affairs is a club organized to promote a better understanding of World problems and affairs. At their meetings the members sometimes hold a discussion on current events or view a film related to some recent event. Besides fulfilling their true purpose, the members also find time to hold many of the usual activities and money making projects.

The highlight of the year for the Afro-American Club members was their Culture Week. Also, members of the club formed a choir which has performed at several schools and churches.

Red Cross Club is a community service organization. Led by Kim Caldwell and advised by Mrs. Rossman, the club has held several activities this year, one of which was a Christmas party. Each member attending brought along a child to share in the fun. This party was held at the North Toledo Community House. A very upright endeavor conducted by the Red Cross involved assembling kits for refugees in East Pakistan

Other money raising projects of the club included a potato chip sale and many bake sales. Membership is supplementary to the business program as the girls learn more about their future jobs.

The Home Experience and Related Occupations Club previously called HEWE, has as their goal molding each member into perfect form for homemaking careers.

Distributive Education

The two DECA chapters have every right to have pride in their accomplishments this year. Two of Woodward's DECA members were elected as city DECA officers. Maurice Grant was elected as president and Chris Lechlak was named secretary. Pam Hayes was named Miss DECA in our district and Cheryl Khalil was her first attendant.

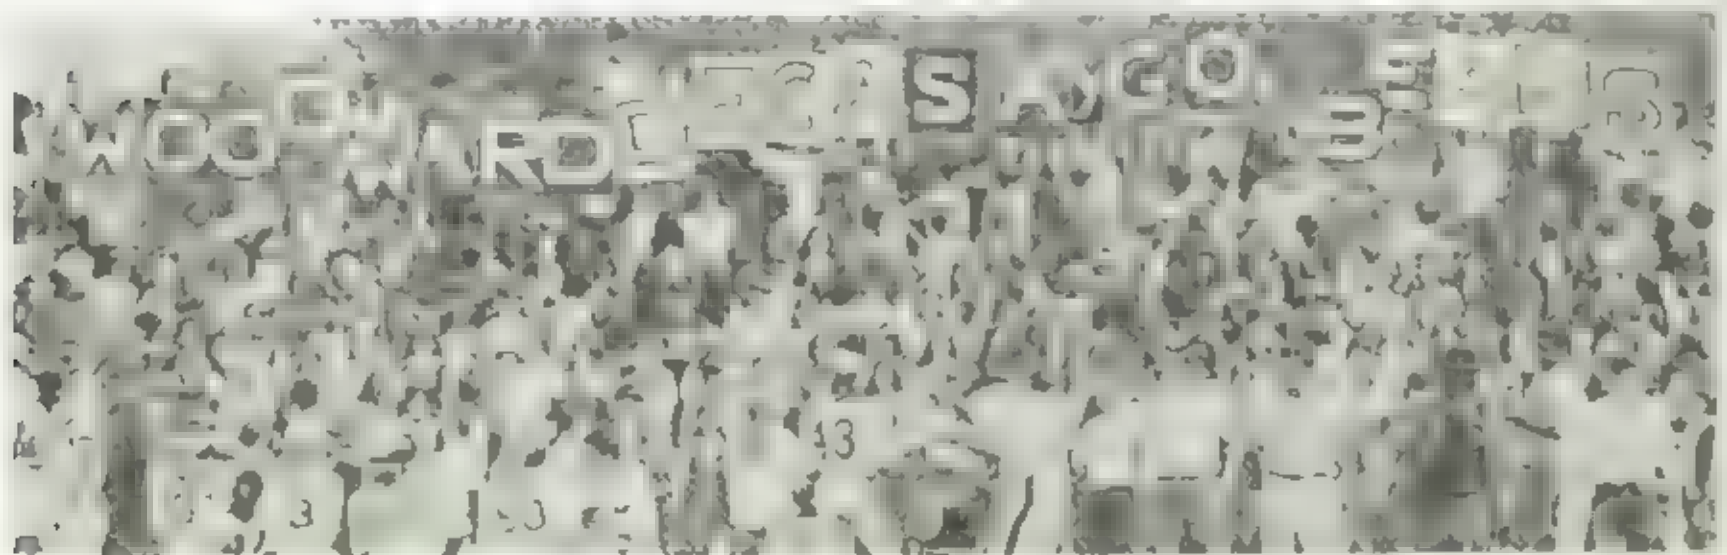

DECA members work on their manuals throughout the year and then enter them in state competition. This year, as in the past, several of the manuals placed. Even with their busy schedule they found time to visit a nursing home during Christmas.

Future Homemakers of America

Future Teachers of America varied their activities this year as they always have. They sponsored money raising ones such as mistletoe sales, bake sales and a roller skating party. FTA then had activities that were geared towards the club's true purpose; these included a day set aside for any interested member to take over any voluntary teacher's classes, being a teacher's aide, and going to elementary schools to give individual attention to slower learners.

FHA is under the leadership of all three Home Economics teachers. Club members gain experience through these competent leaders and coordinate activities.

All of the club members have graduated from an Outward Bound School in Maine, North Carolina, Colorado, Minnesota or Oregon. This is not strictly a male organization. There is an Outward Bound School for females to attend, and many of the girls at Woodward have participated in this rugged program.

Coaching Guidance Imperative For Success

This year's epic football season will forever be remembered as the year of Woodward. One principle of every good football team realized by few persons is that of leadership. The main burden of leadership falls upon our coaching staff.

Coach Sonny Smith, in his third year as our head coach, delivered a team unsurpassed in the history of Woodward High School. Nevertheless, he refused to take full credit for this success. Whenever asked about the accomplishment, he was quick to give much credit to his coaching staff. The man in charge of offensive plays was Coach Pete Stoner. It was his decisions that led to such plays as the touchdown pass used in the last minutes of the Sandusky game to beat them twenty-one to twenty. Coach Jim Smith was in charge of our line. His guidance provided us with one of the best lines in the city. Less well known, but equally important, are Coaches Witte and Heider. They are the freshman and junior varsity coaches respectfully. It is their leadership that produced the standouts of our varsity team.

The combination of all these coaches' efforts was a team of great stature in both area and state circles.

Gridgers Triumph Over Opposition

The varsity Bears were spearheaded by a tremendous defense, headed by co-captain Mark Hobbs. The backbone of our defense was the pass rush. Our pass rush devastated opposing teams by tackling their quarterbacks an average of eight times per game. When their quarterbacks did get rid of the ball, our defensive backfield, averaging three interceptions per game, was waiting there for it. With only eight passing and two running touchdowns scored upon the Bears, and five shut-outs, they showed the city that Woodward does play good defensive ball.

The second reason for our great season was the display of an exceptional offense. Our offense ran through the opposing forces a majority of the time. When trouble appeared, our All-City quarterback, Rick Kaczmarek, passed our way to victory. Averaging twenty points a game, our offense will go down as one of the greatest to play for the Bears.

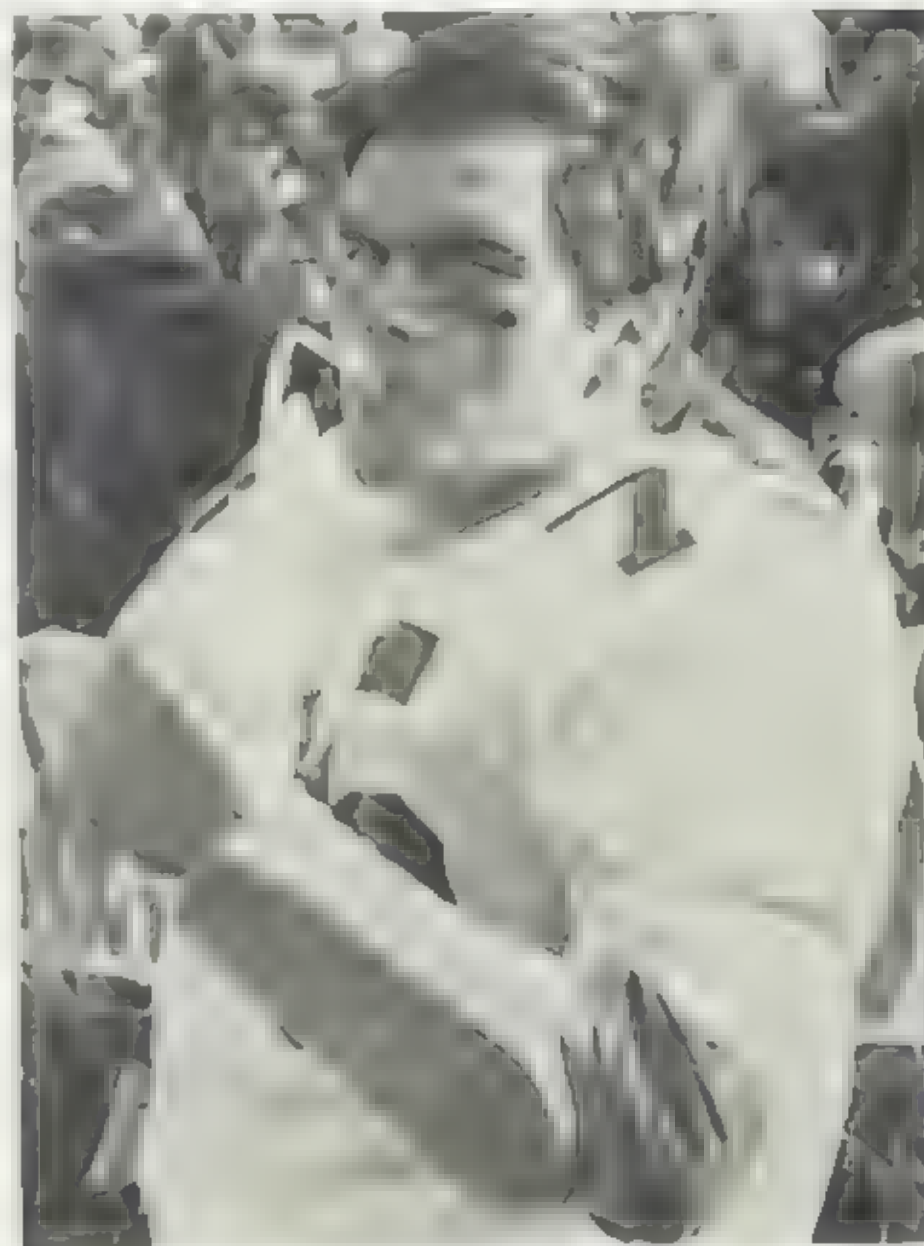

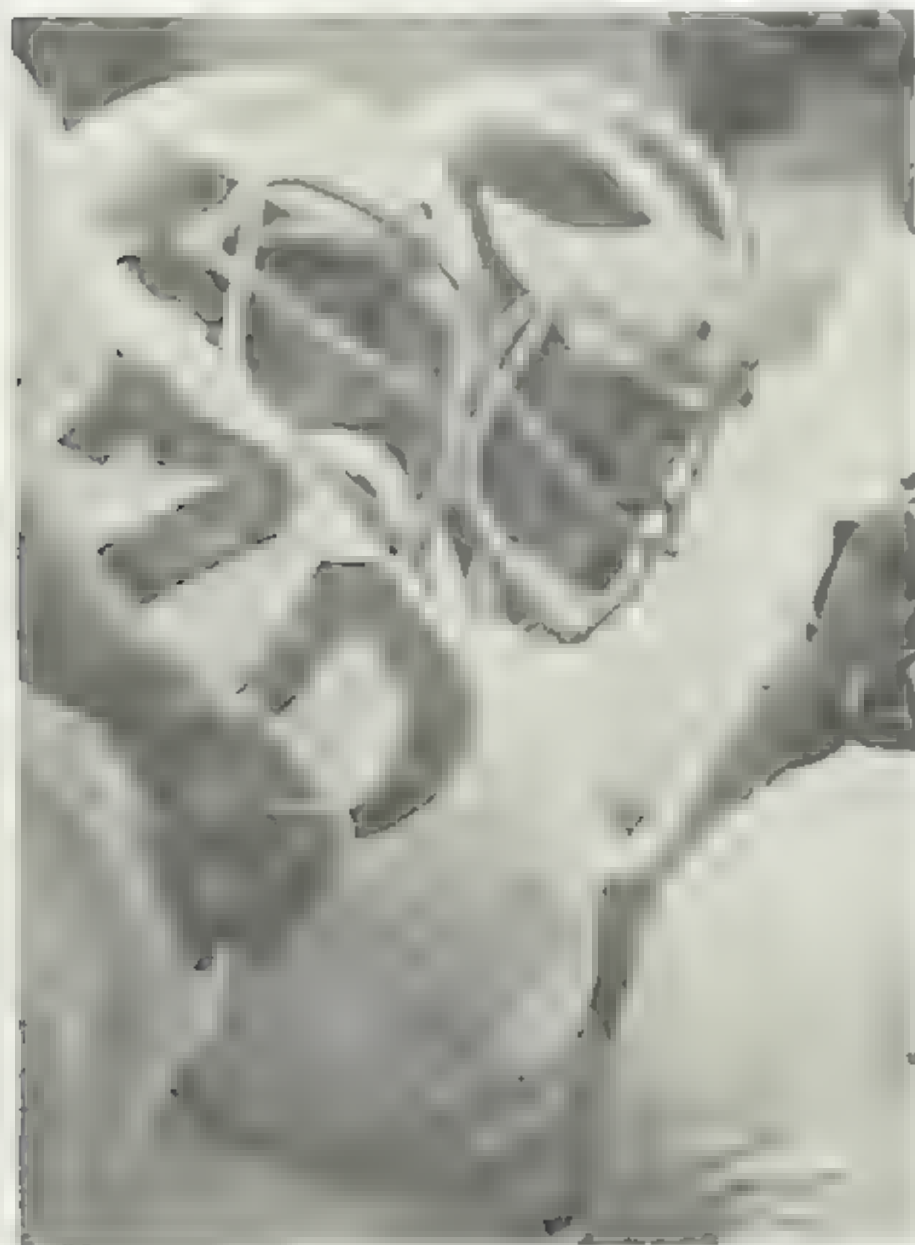

The culmination of the efforts of these two great squads, both offense and defense, was a chance at a city championship for the first time in the history of Woodward High School.

This year the Woodward High School varsity football team displayed their superiority. They were the first Shoe Bowl participant ranked in the top ten in the state, and had the best season record in the City League.

Frosh Football 2nd in Blue; Basketball Team Shows Future Promise

This year's Freshmen Football Team finished half a game away from the Blue Division title. After shutting out the first four teams they faced, the Frosh received a rash of injuries. Nevertheless, coach Tim Witte has been proud of these young men and said that many of them will be prospects for the Varsity Team next year.

Richard Taylor's young men have won 5 out of 6 league games this season. They had a slow start, but their hard work and desire to win paid off. "Woodward had a team of fine young men who were a great pleasure to work with," said Coach Taylor, "I'm sure that we could have a championship Varsity Team in a few years from this group of Freshmen."

Mr. Witte, proud coach, confidently watches his powerful "baby-bear machine" grind out another victory.

Junior Varsity Teams Exhibit Talent

The junior varsity athlete leads an unpublicized life. Overshadowed by the varsity player, he tries to maintain the desire to achieve; the desire that makes great athletes. Making mistakes, but learning from them, provides the junior varsity athlete with the basic fundamentals of his sport.

The J.V. Football Team, coached by Bob Heider, serves as a "farm team" to the varsity club, but they still managed to close their season with the best record in the past three years.

Athletics and education are closely associated in the junior varsity athlete. His education, not only academically, but also athletically, helps prepare him for his goal of playing varsity sports.

The Junior Varsity Basketball Team learned their lesson well. The upward trend of their basketball abilities throughout the season proved that the education Coach, Pete Stoner, had given them in their basketball skills was, indeed, paying off

"The score was tied 68-68 with only four seconds left in the game! The crowd was furiously excited; the teams, fearfully uneasy..." All Woodward students should know the outcome of this game, and those students who were there, will NEVER forget it. For those of you who didn't attend this game, Woodward played Central Catholic that night. It was the most challenging and unexpected game of the basketball season.

This athletic competition has given the team some tense moments, and even when there was a loss, the student body rallied with a loud "Woodward Pride is on our side!" Outwardly, the team may not show their feelings, but deep inside they are proud of themselves.

Woodward's Basketball Team, coached by Jim Knierim had surpassed the expectations of the students. Nelson Overton and Marion Howard led the team in scoring, but the credit can not go solely to these two players; the whole team deserves recognition. This achievement should not go unrewarded. Woodward is proud of these young men, and is very lucky to have a team with their desire and stamina.

Matmen Show Marked Improvement

Wrestling is one of the sports most demanding of the human body. You and your opponent are isolated from the rest of reality while on the mat. If you win, you bask in your glory. However, if you lose, you are the victim of your own mistakes.

This year's squad was looking forward to a great season under the experienced leadership of returning seniors. However, this hope was dashed as injuries benched two of their athletes early in the year.

Through rain, snow, and sunshine Woodward High School's Band marched on. Nothing — but nothing — could have stopped these energetic musicians. With summer practices and hours of outside drilling, the band members strived for perfection. The leadership of director Mr. Keith Buler and drum major, Joe Harris, brought these eager musicians masterfully through half-times, mass meetings, and local parades.

Woodward's marchers campaigned to raise thousands of dollars for brand-new uniforms. Thanks to the hard work done by these people, next year's band is certain to be the best dressed in the city.

Variety At Half-Times

Throughout this season's football half-times four pretty girls in blue and white uniforms performed with the Woodward band. Unique routines and dance numbers displayed their many talents. Led by senior captain, Jan Kohne, the majorettes planned out their routines during the summer practices and each one worked herself to perfection in preparation for the first mass meeting, and the first half-time showing. Summer practice also meant attending Smith-Walbridge Majorette Camp where they swapped twirling and dance numbers with other schools. Practice, patience, and just plain hard work achieved the sparkling variety of their performances. An exhibition of "Polar Bear Pride" started early in the year for the majorettes with their sale of badges, and this spirit continued through the conclusion of the school term.

Varsity Cheerleaders Are Best In City

Vitality, energy, enthusiasm, determination — the list describing the Varsity cheerleaders could go on and on. They project a sense of pep, happiness and hope that keeps the crowd and the team running through glorious victory and upending defeat. Their coordination and dedication to perfection has not gone unnoticed: they were proclaimed the best squad in the city at regional competition at the University of Toledo this summer.

This year's Varsity cheerleaders have been special, from their innovative basketball outfits to their amazingly cohesive ability to function as a group. Pride, a word overused though it is, seems to be the only adjective that adequately describes the feeling these girls have for their school — and the feeling that the school has for them.

Quiz Bowl Crew Conquers Opposition

Proving Perfection Is Gained Through Practice

The Quiz Bowl team consists of five brave students whose knowledge of little-known facts, and quick-on-the-buzzer fingers have made a winning combination in televised competition. Their preparation, many ninth-hour practices, is a fusion of quick-thinking, frustration, hilarity, and complaints from the loser of the moment that, "My buzzer must not be working!" Okay, you say; why do they tax their brains like that? The answer is simply this: why not? Unless you constantly challenge your mind with new ideas, you will become dull and stale. And who wants to be dull and stale? Think about it.

Junior Varsity Cheerleaders Inspire "Woodward Pride!"

They help promote school spirit just like their "big sisters." Can you guess who they are? Right! They're the junior varsity cheerleaders

Throughout the year this peppy squad of smiling sophomores, headed by captain, Nita Specht and her co-captain, Kathy Grzecki, displayed their support for athletic events. Backing the skilled lightweight athletes in both victory and defeat the cheerleaders strive to build "Woodward Pride."

Left, the junior varsity cheerleaders build up their support in more ways than one; top-right, "basket... two points," above, the J.V. captain, Nita Specht, has hopes for the lightweight's victory

The Polarettes, a revived tradition at Woodward, whose sharp outfits and talented steps have erased the basketball in-between-times blues, practice at least twice a week to concentrate upon learning new dances and making movements snappy and bright. They strive diligently to make their performances works of art; creations rather than jumbles of movement. In this endeavor, they have obviously succeeded, for the Polarettes have found a welcome place in the hearts and half-times of the student body

Tattler Presents School News, Activities, Sports

What does Wednesday mean to you? Maybe it's the weekly history quiz or your favorite television show that makes the middle of the week special for you. But for the Tattler staff, Wednesday morning, second hour, is D-Day (Deadline-Day). Room 252 is anything but peace and quiet as eighteen staff members and willing advisor, Miss Markopoulos, organize and edit the four-page "student informer." Typed material is sent to Mr. Stobinski, who manages to have the paper ready for Friday's sales

This year's Tattler is led by Editor-in-Chief, Marilyn Berkel. She and seven capable seniors edit stories and articles gathered by the energetic junior staff. From their finished publication, Woodward gains editorials, sports features, and activity news

Brilliance And Imagination Dominate 1972 SAGA Staff

Beth, imaginative Editor-in-Chief, strives for excellence in all she does. Below, Jan Prymicz and Noreen Wilhelm of the Faculty section.

The Saga Staff is comprised of some of the most talented, spirited, and hard-working people found in the Woodward student body. They produce the finest yearbook in this part of the country, and they do it with their own time and energy.

No further words need be used, as proof of the excellence and creativity of the minds of the staff lies here before you in the 1972 SAGA

Below, Sports assistant, Connie Kalisz. Next to her are Beth Youngman and Sue Krall, in charge of the Activities section

Lepiarz And Fellow Officers Generate A Beginning

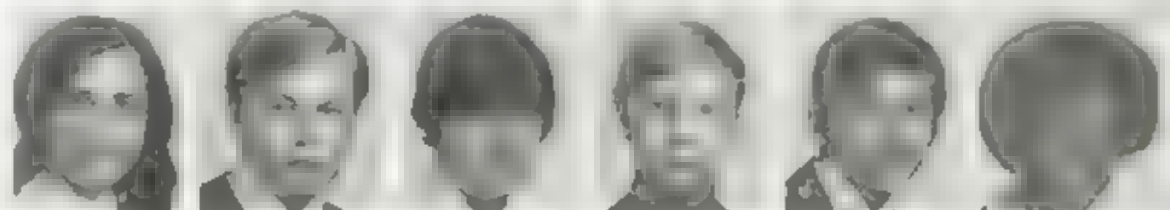

Don Lepiarz, president of the "Class of 75", is trying hard to make the freshmen known and establish spirit and integrity in the class.

What can you say about a Freshman? That he's a first year student? For members of the "Class of 75" this first year will surely not go forgotten.

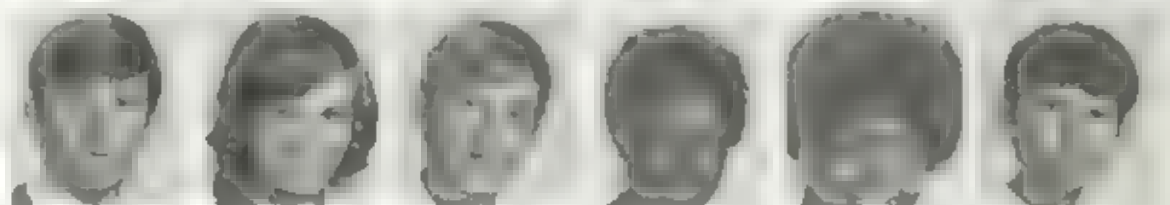

A slow start did not hinder the performance of the freshmen. Soon after elections, freshmen started to build a foundation for their future years at Woodward. Following the leadership and guidance of their new officers, the class's first activity was sponsoring a Mass Meeting honoring the freshmen basketball and wrestling teams. Earlier in that week they rewarded them with a breakfast in appreciation of their efforts exerted throughout the season.

Among other projects taken on by the class was to contend in the "Sign Competition Contest" with the upperclassmen. Also on the list was a banana sale, backing the annual "Freshmen Candy Sale," and, of course, ending the year with a dance for "Freshmen Only." Because of their labor, the Freshmen Class put forth a harvest of accomplishments which will serve the purpose of enlightening and preparing them for their future years.

Homecoming Proves To Be A Great New Experience For Freshmen Class

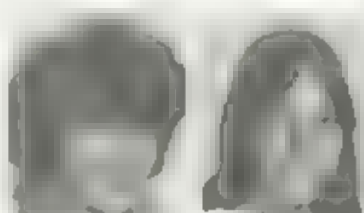

Amazed is just one of the ways to describe the Freshmen after their first W.H.S. Homecoming. Never before had they seen so much pride and spirit go into all the festivities before a big game. Wearing their mums proudly, marching in the Homecoming parade, and decorating their classroom doors was just part of their new experience.

To their surprise, at the Homecoming game their voices seemed to blend in perfectly with the other veteran Woodwardites who attended the game.

The Varsity Drag concluded all the excitement with the setting of "Harvest Moon" to end a memorable Homecoming — a first for the Freshman Class.

Class Officers Dance To Tune Of Organization

To practically everybody, their sophomore year is a very special year. They are now acquainted with Woodward's ways, and have succeeded in earning the special privileges that the freshmen haven't yet received.

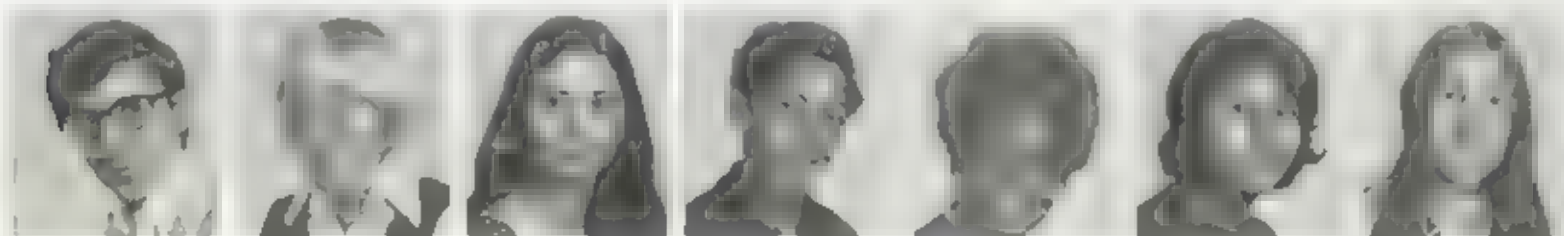

Their "able bodied" officers and advisors have proven to be just that. They have guided the Sophomores to activities such as a Rice-Krispie-Marshmallo-Treat sale, a candy cane sale, and a skiing trip to Mt. Brighton.

The completion of another notable year came with Sophomore Week, May 8 through 12, with the Sophomore Dance held May 12.

A capable leader is one who is hardworking and willing. President, Jackie Haumesser, displays both of these qualities.

"Victory" For The 1971 Homecoming

The 1971 Homecoming festivities have proven to be a different and unique experience for the Sophomore Class. For instance, this is their first chance to influence the selection of the Homecoming Queen

The Sophomores expressed their enthusiasm by participating in the door decorations, purchasing mums, and constructing a float with the theme, "Sophomores Are Cooking Up A Victory."

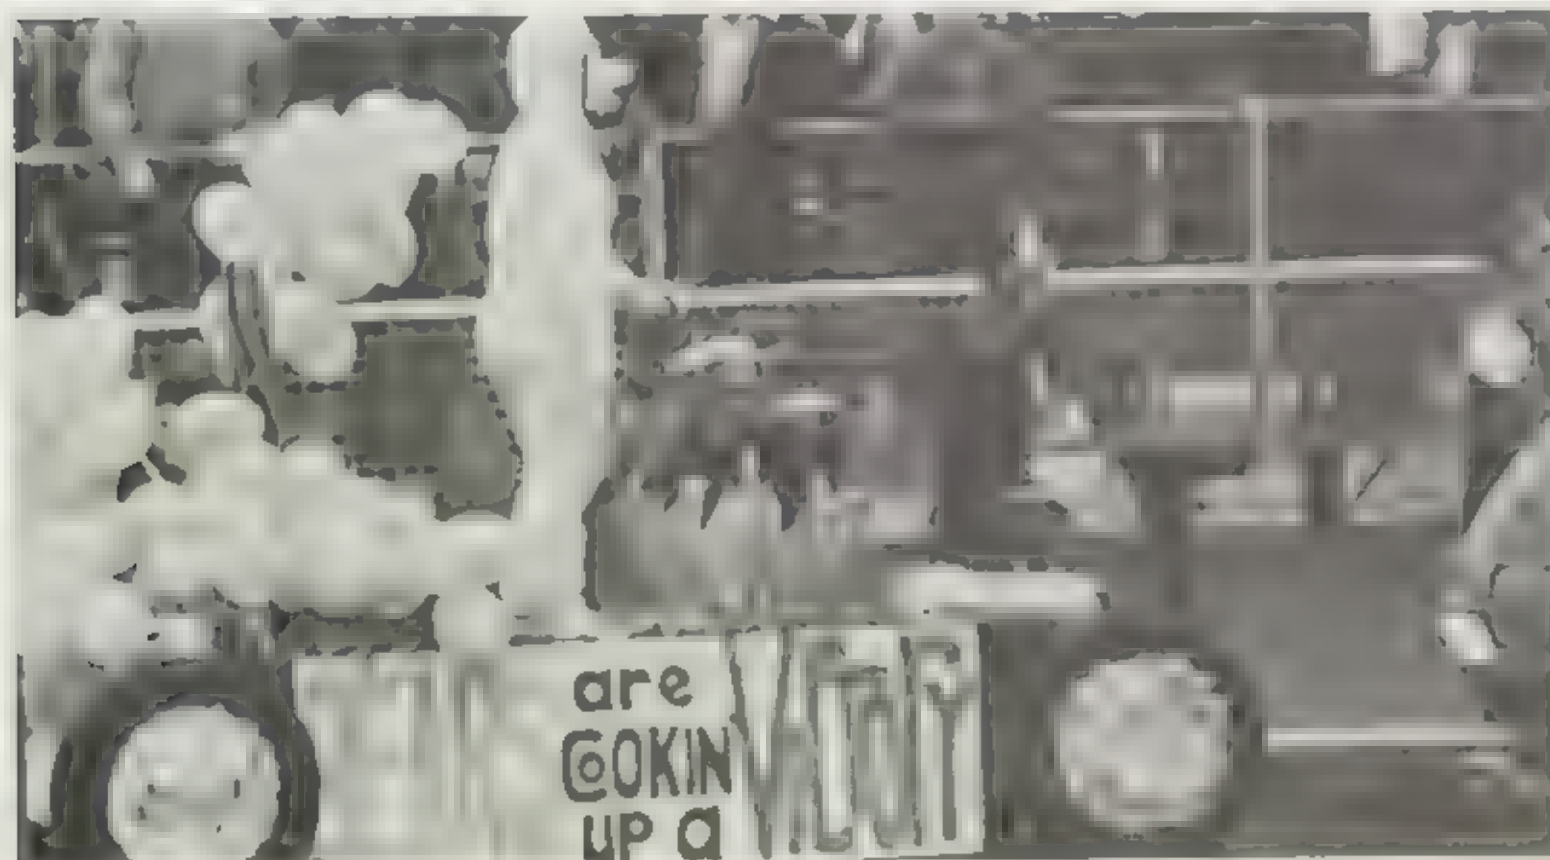

The Class of '74's vivacious spirit also supported our team at the game. Many of the Sophomores were on hand to celebrate our glorious Homecoming Victory at "Harvest Moon," the Varsity Drag

Junior Officers Reap a Harvest of Worthwhile Ideas for Class of '73

According to Webster's dictionary a Junior is "a third-year student in high school or college," but in the eyes of the Class of '73 it's more than that. Much hard work was required to reach this point in school, but along with this work came an opportunity to make friends and be involved in school activities.

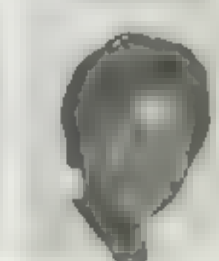

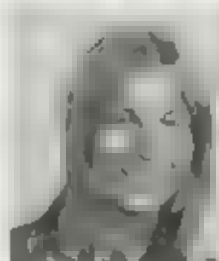

Indeed, this year has been a busy one for the Junior Class. With the elections of new officers came the start of money making projects to help them along, some of which were: a hot chocolate sale, a puppy raffle, and a beanie sale. The week before Christmas was set aside to earn money for the Miami Children's Home through contributions in a cardboard wishing well.

The Juniors have also done a fantastic job in supporting our school. Participation in sports, clubs, and attendance at our sporting events caused the rest of the students to realize that not only Seniors can have spirit.

Involved Juniors Display Their Many Talents Through Entertainment of Friends

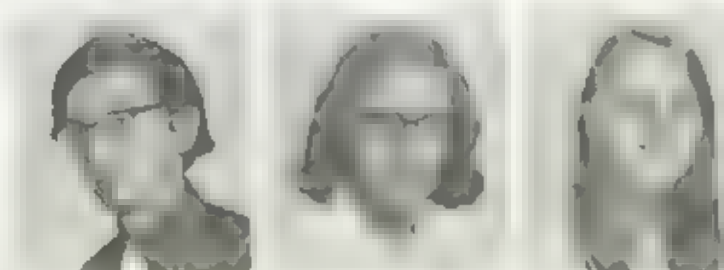

Entertainment of Friends

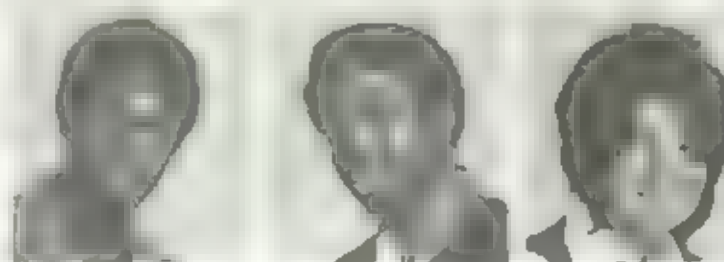

Many times when you're at home or in school you can't help but wonder when all the work is going to end. You say to yourself, "Don't those teachers realize I have a life of my own to live?" One way to break the everyday grind is to become involved; that's what activities are for. There are plenty of opportunities for students to play a part in their school. Cheerleading, joining the band, majorettes, polarettes, clubs, student council, sports, and the list goes on and on.

Extracurricular activities are a great chance to make friends and to create memories — after all, that's what high school is for.

Co-operation Important in Making a Successful Time

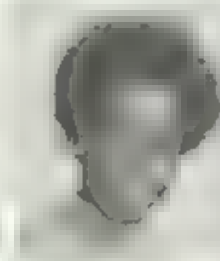

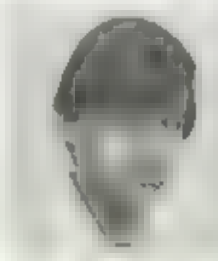

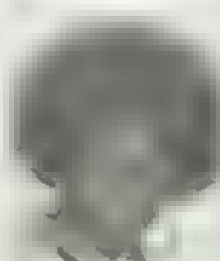

Class officers have to give a lot of time to their job, but everyone agrees that it's worthwhile. Could the job of president be a bit too much for Annette?

"The Cream Of The Crop"

President Darlene LaFountaine keeps all the officers on their toes.

Six Unique Individuals

All too often, class elections are dismissed as popularity contests, and the officers as figure-heads serving no apparent purpose. Many students hold the popular opinion that class officers are superfluous when the class exhibits any amount of talent without them.

It is a rare occasion when a class harbors such a dazzling array of talent, sharp minds, and eager and willing hands. The class of '72 will long be remembered for the many exceptional individuals it yielded. More notable however, are the achievements by the class as a whole. Special abilities and good intentions are not always enough for success. There must be people possessing unique gifts of their own to channel these abilities. Six such architects are this year's Senior class officers.

Together, coupling experience's practicality with fresh enthusiasm, they derived an unparalleled formula for unqualified success.

While Debbie Ryan, sergeant-at-arms, is keeping the peace at class meetings, Terry Hester, secretary, is recording the minutes and keeping a permanent record of the class events.

Spirit Prevails As Seniors Select "Bears Win...No Sweat" As Winning Battlecry

The single event most remembered by seniors must surely be their last homecoming. What other activity can rival the drama, excitement, and suspense that a homecoming generates?

Homecoming '71 culminated many long months of preparation. Countless hours were spent designing and constructing the float. Semi-conscious seniors roamed the halls for days preceding the game. Each had spent most (all?) of the night before fluffing out kleenex carnations or waiting for papier-mache to dry. The theme of the float, "Bears Win... No Sweat," served as a battlecry to lead our team to an awesome victory over Waite. Attempts to kidnap the Waite Indian were thwarted, but some ingenious seniors managed to locate a commendable substitute

Seniors enjoyed a victory celebration at the Varsity Drag, "Harvest Moon." The dance provided a fitting climax for a flawless Homecoming 1971.

Seniors Make Up An Integral

Student Council has directed Woodward through a most active year. President, Beth Youngman, along with the other elected officers and members of the executive board, set out to achieve their goal of uniting Woodward's student body into one, strong, "together" organization.

To raise money the student government sold pickles and sweaters. UNICEF Christmas cards were passed out to all Home Room Representatives and sold with all profits going to aid needy children. These various activities have been of great benefit to Woodward High School's student body and the families in our community.

Commissioner Chris Stawons and Secretary Carol Grachi prove by their expressions what a joy and privilege it is to be active members of Student Council.

Unflappable Senior Class Advisors Perform Tasks "Above And Beyond The Call Of Duty"

Serving as a class advisor requires infinitely more than just okaying announcements and counting ballots for class queen. Countless problems seem to spring from even the simplest projects, problems that must be alleviated before advancing to the next obstacle.

Our four fearless leaders performed a myriad of tasks during their tenure. Highlights included those infamous popcorn sales, chaperoning 50 sun-crazed Seniors to Orlando, laboring over Homecoming floats, or just trying to maintain a semblance of order in otherwise chaotic situations.

Mr. Bolduan, Mr. Cieslewski, Mr. Duvendack, and Mr. McMurray, have consistently gone "above and beyond the call of duty" to help make the class of '72 a colossal success. Each of them is worthy of your praise. A class cannot fail with leadership such as these four offered so willingly.
